

Closing In

Song by Garrett Williamson and Scott Wozniak, Lyrics transcribed by 44nifty

It starts off the same for every week and ends with a game on PS3
Pick something right out of the drawer and hold it up against the floor
Spew some junk about no sex, and a vegan comes just to say Gex
At the desk look like a hoarder, surrounded by some big blue border

I just want to break the mold, to not follow a path
But every week, my life involves mentioning Barrel Blast

It's closing in (my screen is all burned in)
It's closing in (I always have that stupid grin)
It's closing in (And just like my virginity, I'm worried this 1080p outline's here for infinity!)

I'm on the border (Does my whole life need a giant watermark?)
Of starting over (I truly really never noticed something so stark?)
Why is it this way (These are some deep questions and- this is getting too philosophical for me)

(Blue from feeling like I'm suffocating)
To lay it on the line it's closing in on me!

[Guitar solo]

It's closing in (It's always been this way?)
It's closing in (Not sure if that's okay...)
It's closing in (Constantly from day to day!)
To lay it on the line it's closing in on me!
